

Voice Technologies Wins Philips' MDCI Partner Recognition Award 2010

Leading digital dictation supplier recognised by Philips for third year running

22 March 2010 – Voice Technologies has won the MDCI Partner Recognition Award in this year's Philips' Partner Awards, with the results announced last night at an awards ceremony at Theobalds Park, Hertfordshire.

Having previously won awards at both the 2008 and 2009 ceremonies, this third successive award win demonstrates the consistent quality, service and support provided by Voice Technologies, which is a leading supplier of digital dictation and speech recognition solutions in the UK.

Darren Maundrell of Philips says: "Voice Technologies has proven it's commitment to becoming one of the UK's leading digital dictation suppliers, with it's solutions used by organisations across the NHS.

"Through a dedicated approach to developing their services and by offering excellent levels of customer support, the company has enjoyed substantial growth, while still developing their own software to further enhance the digital dictation options available to customers. Philips has presented Voice Technologies with this award in formal recognition of consistent excellence and delivering professionalism and drive."

The Philips Partner Awards have now been running for three years and recognise companies in a range of categories, including technical, sales, marketing and best newcomer.

Alistair Graham, Sales and Technical Director of Voice Technologies, says: "We are thrilled to have won this award, with the external recognition of our services testament to the quality we strive to offer. We plan to continue developing our products and services to provide the best level of support to our customers throughout the UK."
